GRAND CAMP OF SONS BODY ADJOURNS UNTIL TO-DAY

AFTER A BRIEF SESSION.

the gathering of European offer- THE GRAND COMMANDER'S REPORT.

He Reviews the Work of the Year and Makes Suggestions That May nization-To-Day's Programme.

The hour of 10 o'clock yesterday morning had been set for the initial session of the Grand Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, but it was not generally so understood, and it was noon before the Sons convened in the upper hall of the Lee-Camp building. Commander E. P. Cox called the camp into the second annual session, and the exercises opened with prayer by the chaplain of Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, Rev. C. M. Chumbley.

Unfortunately, the hour was the same at which the Grand Camp of Confederate Veterans met down stairs, and the attendance of the Sons was small, Commander Cox stated that on this account it had been agreed to postpone the speech of welcome by Comrade J. M. M. Gregory to the Sons until to-day. Commander Minetree Folkes made a motion that a committee of four be appointed on credentials, and that a recess of ten minutes be taken to formulate its report. The motion was carried, and the Chair appointed on the committee Comrades Folkes, Mann, Ware, and Chumbley. The committee's report, as presented by Chairman Folkes, was as follows: Lee Camp, No. 1-Messrs. J. M. M.

Gregory, L. B. Spence, L. W. Brander, C. M. Chumbley, E. H. Courtney, J. H. Shepperd, Jr., W. A. Jacob, and William Crump Tucker.

John R. Cook Camp, of West Point-Messrs. R. B. Ware and J. V. Bray, with Messrs Roger Brooks and Benjamin S. Gray as alternates. Pickett-Stuart Camp, No. 13, reported no delegates, but was represented by Commander Junius Mann, of Nottoway. State Sovereign Camp, No. 6, of Louisa county-Messrs. J. C. Bibb, W. K. Mc-Kay, Collins Hart, J. O. Hart, and H. H. Anderson. Williamsburg Camp-Messrs. A. Brook and E. M. Lee. and E. M. Lee.

It had been the original idea to appoint from Lee Camp sixteen delegates, but owing to the absence of eight of these the Committee on Credentials made the recommendation that the eight gentlemen present be named as the delegates from Lee Camp and given one vote each. This course was adopted.

The camp then adjourned until noon to-day, when a much larger attendance is Judge Farrar and Colonel William A.

Smoot will address the Sons at to-day's meeting. To-night a grand ball will be meeting. To-night a grand ball will be given the sponsors by the Sons at the Masonic Temple.

ROSTER OF THE CAMPS. The Grand Camp of Sons of Veterans, like the Veteran Grand Camp, is made up of minor camps the State over. There are at present twenty-six of these constituent camps scattered over the Old Dominion, and the roster is as follows: H. A. GRAND COMMANDER'S REPORT. Aside from the address of welcome to-day, and Comrade Mann's response, will be of especial interest the report of Grand-Commander Edwin P. Cox. The most important parts of this paper foliow;

"I would earnestly recommend that you take up and discuss the matter of the formation of new camps, the rehabilitation of old ones which have lapsed, and the promotion of interest in our camps generally. The veteran camps might assist us materially in this matter, and we might appeal to them both through their convention now meeting in this city and sist us materially in this matter, and we might appeal to them both through their convention now meeting in this city, and after their return home. Several of our Sons' camps have been formed through the agency of the veteran camps, and these camps seem to have lasted. The manner and mode of accomplishing these objects, however, are subjects which can but receive benefit from an interchange of views from members of this convention. In connection with this krowth we might also consider the question of having a uniformity of admission blanks. The strength of our association, while exciting a great anxiety, need not, ought not, and cannot exhaust our entire energies. We are preparing to take our fathers' places, and unless we urge the opportunities now presented to us we may be too late to remedy many of the faults which they are seeking to cure.

THE HISTORY QUESTION.

THE HISTORY QUESTION.

"We might consider the use of proper histories in our schools. I saw an extract from the New York Sun, which said that if the Sons of Confederate Veterans wanted a proper school history they ought to write one. While we may not be able to write a proper school history, if we create a demand for one we will get it. The ingenuity and resourcefulness of our people, I believe, is equal to this emergency. I would also call your attention to the fact that we might also seek to lay before our members and the world not only history as written, but also a more living story from the lips of men who have either lived through the scenes described, or have made them a special study.

PROBLEMS OF THE DAY. "Nor need we live altogether in the past, the present has its problems. It is our duty to see that no Confederate veteran is in the poorhouse, nor his seed beging bread. If we cannot dispense the large public gratuities given by the North, it is at least within the scope of our powers to do something more than has been done. An opportunity will be offered us on Friday next to visit the Soldlers' Home, so that we can see what has already been accomplished by the local camp of Sons—the building of a cottage, and the support of a veteran. In the winter of their lives shall we see those who surrendered the springtide of their hopes that they might stand up and look at all men without chame suffer? Your commander has made the suggestion in his report with due deference to the wishes of the convention, and only seeks to draw out impressions from the members as how best to proceed.

A GENERAL DISCUSSION.

"If you will pardon the hint, I think our

A GENERAL DISCUSSION.

"If you will pardon the hint, I think our best means to proceed would be to have a general discussion of each of these matters, and then a committee appointed to consider them. The only reason I have taken this method of bringing these matters' before you is the absence of any committee reports. Our finances have been put off by me to the last, because I dislike to mention disagreeable subjects. We owe $20.50 of debts and have $7.50 to pay them with. In conclusion, I say let us hope for a brilliant future. Remember that the Grand Camp of Virginia started with a membership of forty, I believe that we can so formulate our plans here that when the gavel falls upon the adjournment of this meeting we can go forth with an assurance that not many years more shall roll around before every county and city in old Virginia shall have a living monument in a Sons of Confederate Veterans Camp to the memory of those heroes who fought for and loved her so well.

"One of the duties imposed upon your

"One of the duties imposed upon your Commander is that he shall make an an-nual report of the condition of the Grand Commander is that he shall make an annual report of the condition of the Grand Camp and the work done by it diring his term of office. This duty has been doubled at the present time, because at our meeting at Winchester last October we were unable to get together a quorum, and so, per force of circumstances, the old officers held over. At that meeting in Winchester the following camps were represented: R. E. Lee Camp, of Richmond; J. E.,B. Stuart, of Berryville; Turner Ashby, of Harrisonburg, and M. D. Corse, of Alexandria, represented by R. S. B. Smith, Ed. C. Martz, and Aubrey Bowie, respectively.

"Since that time two camps have been organized—one at Alexandria and one at Staunton. What has become of many of these camps no one knows. The answer of some of them to the roil-call to-day shows that they are still living; that the growth has been slow since the last reunion your commander has been painfully aware, and the question has often arisen in his own mind whether this fact is not due to his own inability, and he is forced to answer, 'Yes,' because he knows that the purpose of this organization is such as must recommend it to every right-thinking son of a Confederate veteran. The time has not yet come when we can say that we are ashamed to bear our father's name. Nay, when that time does come our hopes that the van of progress of this country will be led by southern men must cease, and be buried with the forgotten deeds of a noble and renowned past.

CONSOLIDATION SUGGESTED.

CONSOLIDATION SUGGESTED. "Our organization is a peculiar one in this, that it is separate and distinct from the United Sons of Confederate Veterans. While there has been very little friction between the veteran organizations, and there prevails the best of good feeling between the two Sons' organization, it may not seem out of place at this time to speak of consolidating them. However, I deprot think your commander, should speak of consolidating them. However, I do not think your commander should make any comment in this connection, but I should advise that this matter be taken up by you and thoroughly discuss-ed. The condition of our organization, its taken up by you and thoroughly discussed. The condition of our organization, its growth, and financial strength must at all times be one of momentous importance to us. As has been said before, the officers of your organization have keenly felt this lack of interest. Even some of our members have not been aware that the two organizations existed. Let us not despair on this account. * * That we have made mistakes is to be expected, formed, as our association was, among the turmoils and attractions of the reunion in Richmond by men little acquainted with each other. That misunderstandings should have arisen among us is natural: that such misunderstandings should exist is unnatural, and I believe that explanations can be made if our grievances are stated. Let us, then, so strive to bury these heartburnings and differences, as not only that they no longer remain, but even the recollection of them be forgotten.

Mr. James W. Wassum, of Norfolk, and Miss Mattle DuPriest, of this city, were married at 6:30 o'clock last evening, at the home of the bride's mother, No. 124 south Fourth street. It was a quiet home wedding, the company being composed of only close relatives and personal friends. Mr. Cornelius Hankins, a talented young McGehee, an accomplished young lady of Bowling Green, Ky., were married in Grace Episcopal church of the latter place yesterday at high noon. The wedding, which was quite a pretty one, had attracted much attention in Kentucky, as it had done here, both in social and art circles. The archdeacon of the diocese, the Rev. M. M. Benton, performed the ceremony. The decorations of the church walls and of the rails of the chancel were goldenrod and garlands of red and green Virginia creepers. Great bunches of goldenrod stood within the chancel rail, and the reading desk and table were almost hidfrom view under their covering of vines and flowers. Six young girls in street dresses and wearing Gainsborough hats, ushered in the many friends of both bride and groom. Then, when all were seated, the bride came up the aisle leaning on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. C. G. Fields, of Fulton, Ky., and attended by her sister, Miss Pearl Garth McGehee, while Professor W. F. Knowenberg, of Louisville, filled the church with the in spiring music of Mendelssohn's grand wedding march. As the bride reached the altar the music stopped, and Mr. Hankins entering, the marriage vows were given and taken

The bride looked very handsome in her brown travelling dress, while her sister, was attired in a becoming costume of green satin cloth.

Among the distinguished visitors ent were Hon. Richard Tyler, of Hick-man, Ky.; Miss Susan Younglove, of Johnstown, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Fields, of Fulton, Ky., and Professor W. F. Knowenberg. After the wedding ceremony, the bride and groom left for Nashville, where they will visit the Cen-Their plans afterwards are to come to Richmond on Friday to visit several friends in the city, and finally to settle in their home, 115 east Broad street, after the 2d of November.

From all that report says of Mrs. Hankins, it is safe to prophesy that she will win the esteem and admiration of Richmond people as easily as her hus-band has already done. Both bride and groom have a wide reputation as intellient and talented artists.

Weddings in Richmond Yesterday, Although yesterday was not an ideas day for weddings, several very pretty nuptial events took place here. While rain fell incessantly from morning until night, a large audience filled St. John's German Evangelical church at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when Miss Ida Eliza-beth Euker, the petite and pretty daughter of Mrs. P. Euker, of this city, be-came the bride of Mr. Charles Houlgrove, a popular young gentleman who came here recently from the North, and has since then filled an important position with the Nowlan Jewelry Company. The ceremony was very impressively performed by Rev. Dr. Paul L. Menzel pastor of the church. The bride entered the edifice with her sister and maid of honor, Miss Marie Euker. The latter were a very handsome gown of pale-blue satin, trimmed with real lace, and car-ried a bouquet of white carnations and

The bride wore an elaborate creation of ivory satin and lace and tulle veil, and carried bridal roses and lily-o'-the-
